Dear Students and Staff at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School,

It is indescribable the tragedy of the recent events that occurred at the school, but it is clear that there is still hope. It is unfortunate that it took the death of seventeen young people to wake a sleeping nation. These seventeen people paid the price for Congress’ ignorance. We know that we are the future, and that our president isn’t prepared for the next year’s voters. As I am only in eighth grade, it is the truth, that young people can make president’s act. With the recent school walkouts, it is true that this generation’s young people can make a great impact on the future, because we are the future, and if we don’t, the ignorance of our current president will make the ever growing problems of gun control and gun violence even worse. I admire the activism your students have put forward, because young people can make president’s act. Now it is my turn to play a part in social activism, so I am writing this letter to grieve, give back, and play my part in today’s society.

Sincerely,

An eighth grader from California,
