Becoming Student Ready

Skyline College
Academic Senate
We’re a Diverse Community of Learners committed to supporting students’ efforts to achieve success at every point in their educational journey.
We define “success” as intellectual, professional, and personal growth that leads to degrees, transfer, and living wage careers and leads to increased power and agency in society.
Right now, we’re not even close.
Only about 52% of full-time students graduate within six years.
And, about half of all new students drop out after one semester.
We believe Skyline College has a responsibility to confront these brutal facts by doing everything we can to support success for all students.
Thus, the Academic Senate has made a commitment to do our part to hold Skyline College and ourselves accountable to be “student ready.”
In our view, this means that we must discard the notion that students should be “college ready” on arrival.
As educators, we’re all responsible for seeing that each student has a true chance to succeed.
The senate has drafted language for a resolution on what it means to be “student ready” at Skyline College. We could use your input. Please complete the survey to help us write a definition.
