Program Review

What is Program Review?

Program review is a self-evaluation process by which programs assess their current state, consider the environment in which the program exists, and develop strategies to enhance program effectiveness.

CPR, APP, ALUR: How do They Relate?

Skyline College uses three different instruments in an ongoing cycle of program review: Comprehensive Program Review (CPR), Annual Program Plan (APP), and Administrative Leadership Unit Review (ALUR).

CPR and APP are completed by instructional and student service programs. CPR is the most comprehensive and involves a thorough analysis of the program and its environment every six years. It generally takes several months to complete. APP is a more focused annual update to the CPR. CPRs and APPs completed by departments within the unit inform the ALUR.

The ALUR is completed by administrative units on two levels. The approach varies based on unit structure but involves a summarized assessment of the unit as a whole by the Dean, and then by the Vice President (VP). The assessment may consolidate information across multiple programs (e.g., departments within an instructional division) or across the functions of the unit as a whole (e.g., PRIE). The VP then prioritizes resource requests and pushes them forward for consideration.

CPRs, APPs, and ALURs all result in action plans and resource requests intended to enhance program, unit, and overall institutional effectiveness. Resource allocation is intended to be closely connected to the program review process.

How do I submit my CPR/ APP/ALUR?

Submit your CPR/APP/ALUR through the Strategic Planning Online (SPOL) system. Your responses to the prompts (a.k.a. the narrative) are entered into the program review and accreditation module, while your objectives and resource requests are entered in to the planning module. Each of these modules includes approval chains and feedback mechanisms, starting with your dean.
