Jaime Gustis

Footloose
Saturday Night Live

Jaime grew up on the east coast only a train ride away from New York City and Broadway. With his grandmother's encouragement, he learned to dance as a child and especially excelled at tap. He started college at New York University (NYU) to experience a college with more than the arts, and to be close to audition opportunities. He left NYU to begin his professional career which included four years with the original Broadway production of Footloose. After a successful performance career, Jaime was chosen for and completed the selective Director's Guild of America two year training program, which led to his current position as Assistant Director at Saturday Night Live (SNL) for the film unit which creates all of the show's digital shorts. Outside of SNL, he works with companies and on commercials.
